kununu and InHerSight Team Up to Identify Today’s Issues Facing Women in the Workplace

_The duo launched a co-authored survey this month to uncover real, anonymous perspectives about the state of gender equality at leading companies in the U.S._

BOSTON, MA (October 03, 2016): kununu, the original workplace insights platform, today announced a collaboration with InHerSight, a ratings platform dedicated to improving the workplace for women. The combination of kununu’s experienced leadership in the employer insights space and InHerSight’s understanding of working women, together provide a unique opportunity to uncover key issues facing women in today’s workplace.

Through this collaboration, kununu and InHerSight launched their first Gender Equality In the Workplace Survey, aimed to gather insights from men and women about how female-friendly their companies are. With 7,500+ responses collected to date and counting, working professionals across the nation are encouraged to share their perspectives now through mid-October. When completed, the survey will provide data-driven commentary to advance the conversation about real hot button issues facing women in the workplace today.

“At kununu, we believe that transparency has the power to positively transform the lives of people at work,” said Moritz Kothe, kununu CEO. “Transparency not only helps people find companies where they will thrive, but it helps employers understand how they are performing across the key cultural dimensions that matter. For this reason, we’re thrilled to be teaming up with Ursula and her team at InHerSight. Together, we are committed to harnessing the power of transparency to accelerate progress toward true gender equality in the workplace. And we’re just getting started.”

“Every day we learn more about the benefits of a gender diverse workforce, and there are plenty of reports and studies out there dealing with the wider issues women still face in their careers today. But high-level information is hard to act on,” said InHerSight CEO Ursula Mead. “We believe the best way to help women and companies achieve their goals is with actionable, company-level data, and we’re excited to be partnering with kununu to gather even more of that valuable insight.

Leadership from both kununu and InHerSight will attend at the HR Technology Conference and Exposition at McCormick Place in Chicago from October 4-7, continuing to foster their vision for transparency and gender equality in the workplace.
